ePortfolios for Assessing Individual Students’ Learning
Western Washington University
May 2, 2014
David S. Goldstein, Ph.D.
dgoldstein@uwb.edu

ePortfolio Decision Worksheet

1. Do you, or will you, teach a course in which students produce a variety of work? If so, which course?

2. Might students have an opportunity to revise at least some of their work based on feedback from you, each other, or others?

3. Would you be able and willing to provide more detailed feedback to students mid-quarter (and potentially less at the end of the quarter)?

4. Do you think you could mitigate potential student anxiety stemming from uncertainty about their course grade until the course ends?

5. Might your academic unit benefit from using a sample of course portfolios for its own program/curriculum assessment?